INSTRUCTOR OF SOCIAL STUDIES ADDRESSES CLUB

R. W. Barstow, Jr., of The Manumit School, Speaks To Bensalem Rotarians

AT A DINNER SESSION

Subject is "United Nations, What Price Peace?"

BENSALEM, Nov. 15—Robbins W. Barstow, Jr., of the Manumit School, Hulmeville Road, speaking before Bensalem Rotary Club members last evening in King Hall had as his subject "United Nations, What Price Peace." Mr. Barstow is instructor of social studies at the school.

Mr. Barstow said that from his view-point "We are fighting this war for two main reasons: 1. against something, which is Nazism, Fascism and the like; and 2. for something—lasting peace . . . Peace has been the ideal of men through the ages. It is a positive good, while war is a negative evil. Any future conflict will be much worse than anything we can imagine. So this must be the last war if civilization is to survive. If this is true, what price must we pay for peace, not a peace at any price. The price will be the adoption of those principles which make a brotherhood possible. Now for the first time is it possible for nations of the world to be united. Wendell Willkie's book 'One World,' goes a long way explaining how we should become internationally-minded. No spot in the world is more than 60 hours distance from any other one. Just as our ancestors had to decide between the Articles of Confederation and our present Constitution, just so must the nations decide whether to go their separate ways or to join with other nations and put a stop to war, and gain a lasting peace.

"It was toward this goal that the Dumbarton Oaks conference was striving. The Dumbarton Oaks plan calls for an international organization called 'The United Nations', whose main purpose is to preserve peace and prevent aggression. It calls for a general assembly, a security council and an international court of justice. The general assembly would consist of at least one representative for each country, especially when all nations are again settled at peace. Thus it is hoped that even Germany, Japan, Italy, etc., would eventually be represented.

"A security council of 11 members is planned. Five of these would be permanent, that is, one for each of the following countries: United States of America, England, China, Russia and France. The other six representatives would be chosen from smaller nations, and thus the countries would vary every so often. This security council would function all the time. If aggression arises, action is taken by it. All disputes would go before an international court of justice. When it makes a decision then it is the council's duty to see that the court's decision is fulfilled. At first, diplomacy is used, and later, if necessary, force. Each nation will have to provide a certain quota of arms and men for a kind of international police force. Various sub-

GERMAN RESISTANCE STIFFENS NEAR FORLI

Rome—German resistance stiffened today in the face of intensified British Eighth Army attacks that pressed the enemy further back in the vicinity of Forli.

Units of the Eighth Army continued their advance northwest beyond Forli and scored new advances west of the town, according to the Allied High Command in the Mediterranean which also revealed that an all-Indian division attached to the American Fifth Army high-lighted other action on the Italian front.

Advancing westward of Forli from their bridgeheads across the Montone river, other British units overran the town of Villa Grappa and captured the elevated positions on Monte Poggiolo. The drive west of Forli carried the Tommies to a general line two miles north of the Montone.

AMERICANS MOVE UP THROUGH METZ OUTSKIRTS

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, France—United States assault forces moved up through the outskirts of Metz today to within one and three-quarter miles of the city as Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., prepared to meet any determined German resistance inside the historic bastion with a furious artillery barrage.

Two more forts on the approaches to Metz were toppled by other Third Army troops driving in on the citadel from west of the Moselle River. The Germans attempted some counter-attacks which were quickly repulsed and the Third Army intensified its pressure on the city from the north as well as the south.

The British offensive in eastern Holland, aimed at the strategic road junction of Venlo, near the Reich frontier made steady headway. The Britons who attacked in the vicinity of Weert advanced 3,000 to 4,000 yards to the east to the junction of the Norder and Wessem canals while four bridgeheads were established across the Norder and Wessem canals this morning.

SELL-PERK SCHOOL TO END RIFLE CLUB

Income from Agricultural Department Is Lower This Year

REPORT BY THE NURSE

SELLERSVILLE, Nov. 15—Due to a lack of space, the Sell-Perk Joint School Board announced at its meeting last week, the high school's rifle club will be discontinued immediately.

Harry Westlake and William M. High, reporting for the board agricultural committee, stated that until this year the course had been about self-supporting and that as a result, the cost to the board was trivial. This year, however, the crop production was greatly reduced as a result of the drought. This means, they said, the income was not as large as last year.

Report was made that the tractor which is owned by the local chapter of the Future Farmers of America will be sold.

Announcement was made that $37,700.90, representing state appropriation, will go to the school districts of Sellersville, Perkasie

A Worthwhile Project

(By "The Stroller")

The "Third Ward Eagles" is the latest club for juveniles organized in Bristol and is functioning 100 per cent. The club is the outgrowth of a movement in the Third Ward which might be copied by groups in other sections of the community with profit to the sponsors, as well as those who affiliate with the club.

The club already boasts of having two members in the armed services of their country—Ralph Ratcliffe and William Richardson. The headquarters are in a garage in the rear of the property of William Terneson, 534 Linden street.

Started by a few boys ranging in age from 13 to 17 the group was first comprised of 17 boys, but with two having gone into the service, only 15 remain.

Residents of the ward seeing the advantage of aiding the boys to have a place of meeting and more or less supervised recreation, donated the floor covering and furniture. There are chairs and tables, radio, a Victrola, and a coal stove. Electric lights are used for illumination.

The youngsters for a time paid 50 cents weekly dues but after red and white jackets had been purchased and paid for, the dues were reduced to 25 cents. On the red jackets is the figure "3" above a "W" and then on the front is the name of the boy.

Good Will Hose Co., No. 3, is taking a keen interest in the organization and is going to sponsor the group in athletics, having purchased football helmets and shoulder pads. Plans are also being considered to put up outdoor basketball equipment on a plot of ground owned by the company on Otter street, which the club will be permitted to use.

Losing control of his car and smashing into a tree on the road between Jenkintown and Frankford, Dr. John W. Sigafoos, Doylestown, is in Abington Hospital with a fractured ankle, fractured wrist, lacerated and possibly fractured nose and severe shock.

Dr. Sigafoos was on his way to his office in Frankford and was just leaving Jenkintown when the accident occurred. He has been unable to give any explanation as to what happened other than that something went wrong with the car and that he was unable to control it.

According to the statements of persons who witnessed the accident, the car suddenly swerved across the road and smashed into a tree, completely wrecking the machine and knocking Dr. Sigafoos unconscious. He was taken by ambulance to the Abington Hospital.

The automobile that Dr. Sigafoos was driving had just come from the repair shop after being hit twice by a reckless driver.

OPERATES PACK TRAIN OVER 10,000 FT. PEAKS

Former Fleetwings Employee Aids In Carrying Signal Equipment

NICHOLL PROMOTED

Y-Force Operations Staff, Southwestern China, Nov. 15—Promotion of John J. Nicholl, 25, son of Mrs. E. G. Nicholl, Atlantic City, N. J., to the grade of technician 4th grade has recently been announced by Brigadier General Frank Dorn of Y-Force.

Nicholl, who was graduated from Atlantic City high school in 1938, was working in the payroll and personnel department of Fleetwings, Inc., in Bristol, Pa., when he entered the army in December, 1942. He received his basic training at Camp Crowder, Mo., where he also attended a special Signal Corps radio repair school, and was stationed at San Bernardino, Cal. when ordered overseas.

The sergeant arrived in China in December, 1943, after two months in India and was immediately assigned to Y-Force, the American liaison organization which trained and equipped the armies of the Chinese Expeditionary Force for the current offensive to drive the Japs from Western Yunnan preparatory to reopening the famed Burma Road.

When the Chinese launched the Salween campaign early in May, Y-Force sent small liaison teams with each attacking Chinese unit, to render medical and technical advice and to advise the Chinese commanders.

For several months Nicholl operated a pack train of tiny Chinese horses over the 10,000-foot Kaoli Kung mountains along the Salween River, carrying signal equipment to these teams.

Monsoon rains turned the mountain trails into a morass of clinging, knee-deep mud, and a single slip on the narrow paths would have thrown man or horse to almost certain death thousands of feet below. For his service in the field with Y-Force, Nicholl is entitled to wear a bronze star on his Asiatic campaign ribbon.

At present, the sergeant is working in the signal depot of a liaison headquarters and living in a huge Chinese compound in an ancient city surrounded by a 20-foot medieval stone wall.

SELLERSVILLE CURBS SPEEDING OF TRUCKS

Councilmen Take Action; Set Limit in Borough To 25 M. P. H.

COLLISIONS RECENTLY

SELLERSVILLE, Nov. 15—Due to speeding of trucks in this borough, the maximum speed limit for all vehicles on Route 309 has been set at 25 miles per hour.

A new ordinance is being drawn up, following action last week by Sellersville borough council. A special officer will be on duty continually along with Police Chief Frank H. Hallman.

The action is the result of many complaints lodged by residents of the area. During the discussion that preceded the motion's passage council members stated that numerous truck accidents were causing trouble, including a recent one that resulted in the death of Washington Bernd, of Tylersport, and also another that injured Burgess Harley Apple and Mrs. Apple, of Perkasie. That was the same spot where a man was hit and killed several years ago.

Officer Hallman hinted that he had conducted continued investigations with officials of coal and oil concerns which use Sellersville's Main street excessively. He got the answer that their drivers in some cases had meters for making a record of speeds. Others said their best drivers were gone to war. Councilmen vouched for the fact that cowboy drivers were causing great damage to the town at the expense and injury of local residents and daily endangering small children on their way to school. Mr. Coll will co-operate with Chief Hallman in conducting a speed trap in an effort to reduce accidents. The game will not be to extract large fines but merely to bring home to the drivers the fact that Sellersville borough aims to protect its children and grown-ups continuously.

When the legality of such a speed as 25 miles per hour was raised the matter was ordered by Council President R. S. Frick to be turned over for approval by Solicitor Robert H. Grim.

Councilmen felt that 35 miles per hour is too difficult a speed to use to pin down a driver with when he uses excessive speed at congested traffic spots in town. Also on the same subject, it was mentioned that the traffic light at South Main street and Diamond street is not erected in accord with the proper original specifications. One member of the Street Committee stated that the blueprint had the wrong combination of numbers when the light was placed. This matter is to be corrected.

Bell Telephone Co. also came "on the carpet" for trespassing on the

Woman Cut As She Rescues Two Neighbor Children From the Blaze

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Nov. 15—Two small children were rescued, and 13 families routed early yesterday morning when fire gutted eight houses and eight other houses were damaged to various degrees by smoke and water.

In effecting the rescue of the tots, a girl of two years and boy of six, who were said to be alone in the home at the time, a neighbor woman was cut about the arm and leg, she requiring stitches to close one of the wounds.

Loss to houses and contents is estimated at from $8,000 to $10,000.

The houses damaged by the blaze which lighted the sky and attracted numerous spectators, occurred in a group of 16 frame houses in what is commonly known as "Rumpf's Row", located on Woodland avenue. The cause of the blaze is not determined, but it is the general opinion that the fire started in the vicinity of Nos. 137 to 141.

The children rescued are Donna Welch, aged two, and "Bobby" Barnett, aged six, they being taken to safety by Mrs. James McHale who resided next door. Mrs. McHale, who with her husband and four children, resided at 137 Woodland avenue, believing the Barnet and Welch children were alone in the house, broke a glass in the front window on the first floor, and helped them from the burning structure.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Which Direction?

Washington, Nov. 14.

CONCERNING the direction and the color in domestic affairs of Mr. Roosevelt's fourth administration two views have developed since his election. No indication has come from the President, but this has not prevented his ardent friends from forecasting courses which widely diverge.

—o—

ONE group regards it as certain that he will continue toward the left with a program for far greater Governmental expenditures and a vast extension of social-security legislation so as to insure everyone a happy home, a good education, a lucrative job, ample recreation, adequate medical attention, adequate vacations and adequate old-age pensions. This is Utopian, indeed, but it nevertheless is the idea of the "liberal" elements which had so much to do with the fourth-term campaign, of the "mandate" given Mr. Roosevelt by the election. Without betraying the "liberals" who made his fight for him, he can, they urge, do no less than put the White House weight behind this program.

—o—

SUCH details as to where the money is to come from or how governmental paternalism is thus to be expanded and a semblance of solvency retained are swept aside as of no concern. Those who urge these extensions and expenditures belong to the school which believes that the size of the national debt means nothing because "we owe it to ourselves." They are opposed to any relaxing of the excess-profit taxes on corporations but even more opposed to not relaxing taxes to the point of exemption on the lower bracket incomes. To them the mere notion of a general sales tax is abhorrent and economy a sinful word used only by the greedy rich. Coupled with these social-security plans there must be, according to left-wing spokesmen, further labor legislation along closed-shop lines plus laws to abolish all forms of racial segregation and discrimination.

—o—

CONFIDENCE that Mr. Roosevelt

AIR COMMERCE CONTROL

The preliminary statements of policy enunciated by the United States, Great Britain and Canada at the Chicago international civil aviation conference are in collision at a sufficient number of points to call for the utmost care in preserving the unity of the conference. With Russia out, the conference already lacks a true representation of the scope of post-war international air commerce.

The United States favors an international air authority which shall have extensive "consultative functions," but shall not have the power to "allocate routes and divide the traffic." Essentially, it stands for world-wide free air commerce and is opposed to the granting of national subsidies to airlines to build up air commerce advantages and national prestige.

Great Britain declared, in a white paper published October 8, for a world-wide regulatory and control body similar to the United States Civil Aeronautics Board. It wants this body to have the power, as the CAB has within the United States, to "define international air routes which should be subject to international regulation." It also asks that this body have the power to provide for "the elimination of uneconomic competition by determination of frequencies," which means the total services of all countries operating on any international route, and also that it have the power to fix rates.

Obviously, some international regulatory body is necessary for technical and safety purposes, and to make reports upon which changes of policy can be formulated. But this country will view with suspicion any surrender of the principle of free competition. This trade should be on a sound economic basis, which means that full play should be given to American genius and initiative.

RESTORATION

Evidence that the United States is making headway in restoring its wildfowl has appeared in an impressive manner in many sections of the country this fall. Impressive flights of ducks, and also of geese, have been heading southward. Observers declare that it has been at least 40 years since as many wild waterfowl flew south as has been the case in recent weeks. This remarkable appearance of wild life not only elates the fowler but the many who do not hunt but cherish a love of nature.

What has been done with ducks and geese can be done for other wild life and plant life, too. In the years to come conservation work will provide employment for thousands, who might be idle were it not for this activity. Conservation does not pay immediate cash dividends, but in the long run it distributes worthwhile bonuses to everyone.

Most states are taking preparatory steps toward making the outdoors more attractive and more useful to their citizens in postwar years.

PIGEONS SLOW CLOCK

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. — (INS) — Bucks County commissioners have found out that while town hall pigeons cannot turn back the tower clock, at least they can slow it down by perching on the hands. A clock expert advised them to screen the clock's face.

NO WONDER YOU WAIT

CHICAGO — (INS) — No wonder you can't get near a railroad dining car unless you wait for hours. According to a report delivered at the convention of the Association of American Railroad Dining Officers in Chicago, at least 100,000,000 meals are being served annually by the railroads of the country, an increase of 400 to 500 per cent since the war began.

THE REST OF MY LIFE WITH YOU

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Elizabeth Nelson, after dining with Irene and Matthew, decided that she would like to take the office position. She wanted a brief vacation before undertaking her new duties, but during that time came to the office at intervals for "training." She teased Irene about it unmercifully.

"I'm not really fussy," Irene defended herself, "but Matthew is impatient if things don't just click along."

"I'll click for him," said Elizabeth, laughing, "from nine to five. After that he'll have to click by himself. Banker's hours, that's me. I've done twelve-hour duty too long . . . and," she added, "when I didn't have to; I mean when eight-hour duty came into fashion, I didn't like it. I always wound up behind the eight ball . . . in this case, the wrong eight hours."

Matthew liked Elizabeth and told Irene privately that she would prove efficient. "If she doesn't go and get married right away," he added gloomily.

Sam's bride was a trifle dubious, after she had seen Elizabeth for the first time. Hilda was an intense little creature and she said, confidentially, "I don't see why you pick out a blonde!"

"I'm one," Irene reminded her; "don't you like them?"

"Men," said Hilda, "are so susceptible. When I fell in love with Sam I actually dreaded seeing his office setup. I met him at a party you know and called him mister all evening, hadn't the remotest idea he was an M.D.—someone muffed the introductions. Anyway, when I did see the office and found that Sam and Bill shared one nurse and one secretary and that they were both a million years old, I was so relieved."

"Hilda, Kelcy is thirty-five and Hanson's about thirty-two!"

"Old," emphasized Hilda firmly. She was twenty-one. "Old and not specially good-looking. I was tickled to death. But as for patients—"

"What about them?"

"Don't you ever worry?"

"Why should I?" asked Irene.

Hilda shook her head. "I'm different," she said gloomily. "I wish Sam had specialized in—in men."

"I don't worry about Matthew," Irene told her.

Hilda shook her dark head. She said, after a minute, "Just the same, he's like any other man, he has an eye for a pretty girl."

"Of course he has," Irene agreed. "Did you think I married a blind man?"

She was faintly amused but not particularly disturbed. Irene had trained in a big hospital. She knew all—or most of—the answers. She knew a good deal about doctors and nurses and patients. But Matthew belonged to her. They were married. They loved each other.

Irene began to feel better as time went along and she came to the office now and then, as often as she could find an excuse to come, to help Elizabeth on specially busy days or to take over the telephone and patients while Elizabeth gave treatments.

Elizabeth did not resent this; she was fond of Irene and enjoyed working for Matthew. But, she told her fiancé privately that Matthew was spoiled: First his mother and then Irene. "It's a shame!" she declared.

Her fiancé was a struggling young lawyer with an invalid mother to support and a sister to see through college. His name was Peter Moffat and he looked, Elizabeth thought, a little like Gary Cooper.

Peter grinned at her now across the table of the little café where they were dining.

"What's she like?"

"Who? Oh, Matthew's mother. Grand person, lovely to look at, you'd never dream she had a son so old. I forgot you hadn't met her."

"Irene's all right," he commented, spearing some antipasto, "a little on the sober side, of course."

"She's one of the best. But I do wish she wouldn't wait on him hand and foot," Elizabeth said. "His mother did too, still does. It's a shame," she repeated; "he's really a swell person, even if he is spoiled."

"See that you don't spoil him too," warned Peter sternly.

"Darling, I have no time to spoil anyone but you."

"You don't do too good a job," he said glumly. "Shall we go to a movie?"

There was so little comfort for lovers in New York. They couldn't afford theaters and night clubs, but they could walk, and window shop, or ride on a bus. They couldn't go home to Peter's and listen to his mother complain. She was very hostile to Elizabeth in the sweetest possible way. They did not dare go to Elizabeth's.

Now she said, looking away from him, "I'm thinking of moving, some of the girls want me to share an apartment with them. It—it would be a place to go . . ." and she added quickly, "they'd be in and out what with dates and all."

He repeated quietly, "Well, Betty, how about a movie?"

The weeks slipped past and Irene felt very well. She was conscious of an enormous and patient peace, a sense of waiting and fulfillment. Matthew was sweet to her, very careful of her always, but he was away a good deal. Some of his newest patients lived out of town and he was likely to be called to Long Island or Westchester. He would come home late and turn on all the lights—he loved a blaze of light—and tell Irene all about things, wrenching at his collar, flinging a shoe across the room, chucking his coat over a chair.

"It's just that she never grew up," he might say; "she had colic as a baby, she still has it. It's amazing. On a hundred thousand a year you can afford to pamper a mild tummyache. Woman eats too much. Nothing else the matter with her, really."

"It's wicked," Irene might answer sleepily; "she must be crazy, calling you all hours of the night."

"I like 'em crazy," he'd answer "when they pay their bills. Too bad I can't drum up an appendix for old Bill, but hers has been bottled since the Civil War or thereabouts."

After Matthew was asleep she would find she could not go back to sleep again. Often she would get up quietly and straighten out the vast confusion he always managed to leave behind him. He never noticed that she did; he was accustomed to painless order out of careless chaos.

Toward the end of the winter Judith Lambert came East with her mother and aunt. They took an apartment in one of the hotels. Judith telephoned Mary Norman and Mary dined with them. She found Mrs. Lambert very subdued; "a carbon copy of herself," she told Matthew afterwards, "she was always so vivacious. Not a pretty woman at any time but an attractive one."

Mrs. Loring—the rich, redoubtable Aunt Ella—was now tremendously fat, with tiny, high-arched feet of which she was inordinately proud. She kept her hair black and her skin white, and was really prettier than she had been in her leaner girlhood. She had the same air of amiable arrogance which Mary remembered from their school days, and it was no wonder that her sister was more or less erased by her overpowering presence. Everything about her was overpowering: the perfume to which she was addicted, her custom-made frocks, her furs, her jewels, her almost incredible personal maid, with a face like the side of a barn door and hard efficient hands.

"You're lovelier than ever," Eva Lambert told Mary, with her wistful smile, regarding her with dark eyes in which tragedy had faded to unhappy remembrance. Ella agreed heartily. "That's the first thing I thought . . . remember how skinny you used to be? . . . not that you're much better now. Of course I'm too fat but my doctors don't believe in drastic diets. It's glands, they say. Pity you never married again, Mary."

"Never had a chance," answered Mary, smiling.

They were dining in the apartment, deftly served by a waiter and a captain. Ella looked with pleasure upon baked chicken in a heavy cream and cheese sauce. She said, "Nonsense!"

"Well, then, I never wanted to."

"Why? Because for that great oaf of a boy, what's his name . . . Matthew? Judith was always talking about him."

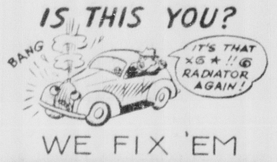

"Yes. Matthew."

"It's absurd," announced Ella, "to sacrifice yourself for your children. Where does it get you? Not that I ever had any, but you slave and sacrifice for them, and what happens? They grow up and get married and you're back where you started."

Today's Quiet Moment

By the Rev. J. H. Queen
Pastor, Bethel A. M. E. Church

Eternal Father in heaven, as we enter the winter season of this year keep our hearts warm and sunny with the grace of a resurrected Lord. Let our influence be an inspiration for the growth of the church. Let our songs be expressive of the enthusiasm of new-born children of God. Keep our faith fresh and clean that the growth of the church may be comparable to growth of nature that expresses itself each day around us. Teach us the secret of growing into warmer and brighter fellowships that the joy of tomorrow might be our experience of today. Through Jesus the King of the sunshine. Amen.

UTILITY GRADE OF BEEF MAKES A VERY DELICIOUS DINNER

By Mary Jacoby Fleetham
Home Economics Representative

When other meats are scarce or high in point value, try utility grade beef. It is point free and is available in many markets.

Utility grade beef has little or no fat but it is just as nutriticus as the better grades of meat though it is not so tender. One way to make the meat tender is to score it as for cube steaks, or chop or grind the meat. Slow cooking in a small amount of liquid that will provide steam will help to make the less tender cuts more tender.

To give the meat a good flavor and have a delicious brown gravy, brown the meat in fat. If desired, the meat may be rolled in flour before browning. Simmer, do not boil, meat when cooking it on top of the stove. If cooking meat in the oven, cook it slowly until tender.

For delicious Swiss steak, have round steak cut one and a half to two inches thick. Roll the meat in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Put drippings or other fat in a heavy skillet and brown the meat on all sides. Add one cup of canned tomatoes and cover tightly. Let simmer on top of the stove or cook in a slow oven, 300 degrees F., until tender. It will take about three hours for a 3-pound steak to cook tender. One hour before the meat is done, put a layer of sliced raw onions on top of the steak. If the liquid cooks away, add more tomatoes or hot water.

Periodic functional pains don't worry me now. Thanks to those grand new Chi-Ches-Ters Pills! My druggist tells me the reason they're so effective is because of a special ingredient which is intended to help relieve the tension that causes functional distress. It works by helping to relax the affected part—not merely by deadening pain. The new Chi-Ches-Ters contain an added iron factor, too, intended to act as a tonic on your blood. Try the new Chi-Ches-Ters Pills on your "difficult days." Ask your druggist tomorrow for a 50c size and follow directions on the package.

JAPANESE GLOOM

There are more battles to be fought over the rugged terrain and in the jungles of the Philippines. When Luzon, the key island is reached, the attacking Americans will find that the Japanese have many defensive advantages. How long it will take to clean the enemy out, even in view of America's preponderant power on land, in the air and at sea, is anybody's guess.

But following the sweeping triumph of American naval and air forces at sea in the waters of the Philippines, it seems unlikely that the invasion will now be threatened by enemy reinforcements. Japan's exterior communications have been wrecked by American Fleet action. Within the islands any communications Japan has left will be at the mercy of the American air force. The enemy has no alternative but to fight in the archipelago with what he now has there.

And there is no sea road America can not travel. It is now possible for warships and carriers to proceed right up to the coast of China, where Japan holds the ports and is striving desperately to establish communications by land. Admiral Nimitz can send task forces to the Indies, source of Japan's oil and rubber. The American Navy conceivably could go to Japan itself. As Admiral Nimitz has said, Japan can not challenge any sizeable American force for some time to come.

Japanese warlords are justified in the gloomy view they are taking of the source of the conflict in the immediate future. Supply lines of their empire are all but severed and they have no adequate defense against the devastating attacks to come by American carrier and land-based bombers.

THE WHEAT OUTLOOK

Advices from Europe confirm previous predictions that there will be heavy exports of American wheat to Europe after the war. Experts now estimate the European need at 10,000,000 tons per year of the bread grain to improve the diet of Europeans. That would be approximately 330,000,000 bushels.

Per capita consumption of food in Europe now is approximately 85 per cent of the prewar figure. Every effort will be made to restore prewar normal consumption when hostilities cease. It is plain to all that Europe can not get back to heavy crop production in one season. The great food exporting nations—Canada, the United States and Argentina—will be drawn upon to fill the gap.

The United States wheat crop, according to reports, will be harvested next year from a somewhat larger acreage than this year. Many farmers planted winter wheat early to get pasture and some insect damage is reported.

Interesting reading for weeks will be explanations of "percentage points of error" by the various straw vote outfits.

Science says it is possible to make hats from soybeans. The citizen who offers to eat his may find it a substantial meal.

THE REST OF MY LIFE WITH YOU

by Faith Baldwin

Copr. 1943, by author

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Judith managed to talk to Irene about motion-picture studios . . . as she thought of Matthew . . . it just had to be. That's why nothing else, no one else, was satisfactory.

She was twenty-three years. Grown-up, or so she had fancied. But she had not grown up until a moment ago. Girl into woman, as quickly as that, and more painfully than she could ever have imagined.

Presently Judith was able to say, "I'm afraid I must leave now, I'm going out to dinner." She smiled at Irene. "Thanks for letting me come, it was such fun."

What am I saying? she thought wildly.

Matthew was speaking. He was asking, "Where are you going? Maybe it's my way."

She could not look at him, she dared not. Judith thought, with a sudden aching sorrow: Not your way, Matthew, never your way.

She named her hotel, and he said cheerfully, "Right up my alley. I'll drop you off."

"That's just what he will do," remarked his mother resignedly, "if you aren't careful, demon driver."

Irene said instantly, "He's a very good driver, really, Judith." She looked up smiling and Judith, looking at her as if for the first time, saw that her eyes were beautiful with patience and hope. "You needn't be afraid."

"I'm not afraid," Judith asserted vaguely.

"I'm safe all right," said Matthew, consoling. "Come along, Judy, your dinner date won't mind being kept waiting but my patient will raise Cain. How about you, mother?"

"I'm staying for dinner."

"Steady boarder," Matthew grumbled. "Judy, will you get going?"

Judith kissed Mary and took Irene's hand. She said, "I'll see you soon, I hope," and somehow escaped from the pleasant room with the firelight and its air of waiting and intimacy. But it was not escape, for Matthew was beside her, with all that same lovable, exasperating arrogance which years ago had sent her tagging at his heels, grateful for a word or a command.

He had his hand on her arm and she held herself completely rigid, determined not to pay any attention to it, not to feel, not to think.

They went outside where the wind blew chilly and wet, the lazy flakes came down and melted. And Matthew said, taking her toward the car, "Don't slip! No, do slip. I have a way with ankles." He laughed and added, "Some buffalo robe you have there."

It was a mink coat, dark, silky, Aunt Ella's latest Christmas gift. The snow stung Judith's eyelids—was all that sting due to snow?—and settled briefly on her bright brown hair and little cap of mink. She said, "Aunt Ella's very generous."

"Who's her doctor?" smiled Matthew.

He put her in the car and they started for the hotel. He drove too fast, but she was not afraid; not of his driving, nor of the slithery streets nor the startled policemen. . . . One stopped them and Matthew said, his license ready, "I'm on a call."

The officer looked dubiously at Judith, shook his head, then said, "I'm warning you, doc," and let them go on.

"I can get out of anything," boasted Matthew complacently, and she could have killed him.

He talked of Irene on the way to the hotel. He talked of his mother and of his work. He talked, without embarrassment, of the baby.

"Seems silly, doesn't it?" he chattered. "Me with a kid!"

Judith said, a little tartly, "It doesn't seem silly to Irene."

"Oh, women!" exclaimed Matthew, dismissing them with tolerant affection. "She and mother drive me nuts! So many dozens of this, so many dozens of that. Twice in his life a man is completely submerged, on his wedding day and when he is an expectant father." He laughed and added, "Look here, what's this I hear about you being engaged and then giving the poor guy the air?"

She said, "That's it."

"What? Is this double-talk?"

"I mean that's what you heard and that's all there is, there isn't any more."

"Okay," said Matthew, his friendly conversational gesture rebuffed; "if that's the way you feel, don't confide in uncle."

She said, "There isn't anything to confide. He—Dan—was very attractive. I liked him a lot, but—"

Judith broke off. "Just one of those things," she ended.

Matthew spoke gently. She wished that he wouldn't. It made things worse. "I'm sorry, Judy."

"I'm not, not now," she said. "Just at first . . . Well, I hate to hurt anyone."

They were at the hotel. She felt his hand on hers. She heard him say, "So long . . . be seein' you," and saw the car shoot away to make the light. She was unaware of how long she stood there on the wet cold pavement to watch it.

Lobby. Smiling desk clerk. Elevators. The long walk down the corridor. Her door and her mother and Aunt Ella sitting there, with some utterly strange woman and a table with cocktail glasses.

"Have a good time?" her mother wanted to know, and "Tell us all about it," urged Aunt Ella, presenting the elderly and dour guest, whose name Judith never learned.

She smiled at them. "It's late, I have to bathe and dress and then fly. Early curtain, I think Jimmy said."

"Jimmy Treadway?" asked Aunt Ella, and her plucked eyebrow twitched.

"The same."

She had met him in California. He was playing polo there. He was very eligible and very good looking and, she thought, rather in love with her although he hadn't got around to saying it yet. For a little while Judith had thought, it would be easy to love six feet of amusing manhood, and six million dollars. Now it wouldn't be easy.

She went into her bedroom, beautifully furnished with the cold and impersonal luxury of a great hotel, took off her coat and hung it up. She put her hat away, laid her bag aside, her gloves. It was entirely mechanical. She thought of the frock she would wear and of the scent she would choose to make fragrant the big tub of steaming water. She thought of a new lipstick.

Wrong color lipstick, Matthew had said.

Judith cast herself across the bed. She did not cry, she could not. She told herself: I will not, I will not. . . . I will not think of him, I will not acknowledge . . . Surely you could compel your emotions? You could even kill them.

Someone knocked. It was Anna, Aunt Ella's maid, who came in with her shrewd live eyes, her wooden battered face, and her wooden body. She looked like something out of Noah's ark. Her hair was scant, black and as shiny as if painted on, and there were round spots of color in her cheeks. She said that she would draw Judith's bath and lay out her frock.

Dinner, and dancing. The play. Judith never afterward remembered what it was about. A supper club and more dancing . . . Jimmy bending his tall head and putting his cheek against her own and saying, "You're much too alluring. I think of you too much. When are we seeing each other again?"

It was very late when Judith reached home. Anna had laid out her nightgown, her robe and slippers. There was a special delivery from Dan . . . poor Dan, dear Dan! There were flowers from someone else. And a note from her mother on the pillow. "Dear, I hope you had a good time, do sleep late."

Judith sat in front of the mirror and, while patting in the cream, thought: What's the use; What a crazy life, every day you put your face on and take it off, half a dozen times maybe.

I'm pretty, she thought, I'm young . . . Dan loved my face—others have too. I have a good figure. I'm young and terribly healthy, I'll live for years and years. Years. She'd forget, perhaps very soon. Perhaps this was like some swift and sudden illness, striking without warning, leaving you limp and weak, then convalescent and at last cured.

Judith went to bed and the traffic noises reached her, there on the eighteenth floor. Suddenly, an ambulance lifted its shrill compelling voice. . . . Ambulance, hospitals, doctors, Matthew. It all came back to him, after all.

I've known him forever, and I don't know him at all, Judith told herself. He thinks of me as a kid. Why shouldn't he? He's married. He's been married for three years. He's in love with his wife. . . .

Several people have asked us hat are the requirements of the nor rolls. In Dairy Herd Improvement Associations work any w which makes over 50 pounds butterfat per month goes on the nor roll. Every herd which has average of 30 pounds of fat per w including dry cows also goes the honor roll. The list would too long it every 50 pound cow ere named and so for the purses of this column we shall list nly those cows making over 70 unds of fat per month. It might e of interest to know that on the verage only 5 to 10% of the cows ake the honor roll each month ut of the 1000 cows reported from e 50 herds tested.

Several folks have also asked ow are these records ascertained. n brief there are about 150 Bucks ounty Farmers who have formed he Bucks County Dairy Herd Improvement Associations. They hire esters or supervisors, of which our reporters are two. Official ecords are kept of each cow, the mount of milk produced, her butter fat test, the percentage of butter fat produced, cost of feed, cow's rofit. Thus a farmer knows which cows are making him money and which he should get rid of. They also tell out of which cows he should raise calves to improve his herd, and finally they give reliable information to a buyer as to the value of a cow, adding dollars to her price if sold.

While both your reporters' associations are full at the moment, your reporters would be glad to run free sample tests on any individual cows in Bucks County herds and arrangements may be made by calling Yardley 2956.

A number of top flight sales in this area have made big news on Bucks County farms. Lewis Duerr, former Bucks Countyite, dispersed his herd the past month and several of these fine cows came to Bucks County. Charles Lownes purchased a senior herd sire Helbon Nomad of famed Baker farm breeding and two fine looking cows. Louis Baingo also bought top priced cows at the Duerr sale.

As mentioned in last month's "Bull Pen" Ed Satterthwaite and Frank Mullins had several cows in the Pennsylvania State Sale at York. Amos and Milton Satterthwaite attended the sale and Milton bought a dandy type cow and the quality of the sale was so high that even Amos found himself bidding. Joseph Canby purchased one of the top cows in this sale.

Another Holstein sale at Erbs at Middletown found John Thompson of Newtown the proud possessor of 25 Canadian cows. Most of these have freshened now and they are more than living up to their promise. John also bought Charles Lownes' former herd sire, King Joe, which had been bred by Isaac Yates.

The George School Farm has sold two granddaughters of Joe Canby's Dean of the Pearls to Leslie Kirk. These daughters of Greenwood Educator should make dandy foundation cows for Mr. Kirk.

Robert Stapler has sold a Holstein cow with a record on her, to Homer Tomlinson of Wrightstown.

News from the Guernsey breeders this month has not been so voluminous but the Theodore Stewart dispersal at Colmar found most Bucks County Guernsey breeders present. Alvin Worthington, whose herd has not averaged less than 400 pounds of fat per cow for over ten years, purchased a new herd sire at this sale. At the Penna. State Guernsey sale Joseph Briggs bought two cows and is well pleased with their performance to date. Mrs. Helen Fessenden at Buckingham Valley purchased five Guernseys from Dr. Clayton rounding out her herd and Partridge Hall has sold a bull and several cows of late for dairy purposes. F. E. Becker purchased two top Guernsey bull calves of the Hardwick Mixner blood line. Unfortunately the one purchased at the Doylestown sale died of pneumonia and an equally promising Junior herd sire has been secured at Locust Grove dairy.

Three new members have been welcomed and crowded into the Association in the past month—Robert von Hintz, Wilmer Althouse and John Thompson. Several others are hopefully on the waiting list for the beginning of the testing year in March.

For a model calf pen at low cost your reporters recommend a visit to the farm of Milton Satterthwaite where Dairy Specialist Joe Nagget has erected sample calf pens which can be easily constructed out of used lumber.

For the details on how a Jersey cow found her way into Joe Canby's barn, consult Paul Misner, the purchaser. That Mr. Canby is planning to attend the Blue Ribbon sale at Waukesha, Wisconsin, leads us to assume he is still interested in breeding Holstein cattle.

By the way, top attraction at that sale is a son of Montvic Lochinvar who brought $13,000 for half interest at the Dunloggin dispersal. His dam is Dunloggin Mistress Queen, reported to be "the greatest cow that ever lived at Dunloggin." We know of at least one person who is prepared to pay $10,000 to own her.

CHANGES IN SLEEVES MAKE OLD DRESSES LOOK LIKE NEW ONES

By Mary Jacoby Fleetham
(Home Economics Representative)

Last year's dresses may need a little attention to bring them up-to-date. Perhaps only a slight change in the sleeves will do the trick.

Sleeves this season are all lengths, from short cap to full length. They may be close-fitting or wider, with or without cuffs. One thing all sleeves have in common is a smooth rounded shoulder line or shoulder pads. No more pleats, gathers, or darts. The shoulders are wide but this width is in the dress with the sleeves hanging smooth and straight from the shoulders.

If sleeves in your dress have gathers, pleats, or darts which are not cut off underneath, rip the upper half of the sleeves. Adjust shoulder pads in the dress having them extend a half inch into the armholes. Pin in sleeves, turning under the excess height and fullness. When you have decided upon a good line, baste, stitch, and press. Trim off the excess material. If darts were cut off when the sleeves were made, you will have to leave them. However, most of the darts will be removed when the excess height of the sleeve is turned under.

For a dress with shirtwaist sleeves gathered into cuffs, leave as they are or if worn, cut the sleeve off to three-quarter length. The three-quarter length sleeve is moderately close-fitting so take up any excess width in the seam. Finish with a plain facing on the wrong side, or if the dress has a small round collar add turn back cuffs to the sleeves.

SCRANTON — (INS) — The cooperation of the public school system in postwar planning was declared necessary for a brighter postwar world, by Dr. Paul Cressman, director of the Bureau of Instruction for the Department of Public Instruction. Addressing a teachers' institute, he asserted industries will come only to towns where they are sure of finding trained workers.

What I can't understand is how these really stunning hats that come just in time for holiday wear can be had for but $2.85, in the Snellenburg Main Floor Millinery Dept. There are several unusually smart styles, all dressy. Nearly every one has a touch of black, sequins or veils. Flowers, loops and bows of the "winter white" felt are used, too. Do see them while the choice is wide. (1st fl.)

YOUR "OTHER HA'DS" should be lovely ones. Yes, I'm talking about gloves. Gloves should never be mere hand coverings. This season the right ones are not always easy to find. That is why I am delighted with several styles I've found in the unusually well stocked Glove Dept. of the Snellenburg Store. For yourselves, or for gifts, you'll adore the "Hands Off" 20 button length gloves which are really two-piece affairs, detachable at the wrist for removing in a restaurant, etc. In black or a right fuchia, $3.98. Sizes about 6 to 7½. (1st fl.)

GO GAILY shod to holiday occasions, even though they aren't formal affairs. The "Modern Youth" shoes in the Snellenburg Store have a cut and a dash girls and women with young feet adore. Just now there is an array of "Modern Youth" "openwork" black suedes that are honeys. Stunning high heels about 2½ ins. high. Both pump and D'Orsay designs, in all black. Open toes, some sling backs with adjustable buckles. The lace-like cut-out designs give these shoes a lightsome look that goes well with afternoon or short dinner dresses. And—marvelous—priced at only $4.95. (1st fl.)

"THE" COAT for general sports wear is still the "Chesterfield." It is as popular and smart this season as last. Naturally, the better the coat, the smarter its appearance, and I have found us some beauties at $39.95. The Junior Coat Department of the Snellenburg Store displays these coats in sizes 9 to 15, suitable for all ages of girls and women who can wear these sizes. The rich 100% wool fabrics are a delight, and include Melton cloths, famous Stroocks chinchillas, sueded weaves, etc. Fitted or box, and in all high colors, plus black and brown! Cozily interlined. (2nd fl.)

PINK AND CREAM oven-and-serve pottery! Beautiful! Decorates the table. White, pink lined. Makes fine hostess gifts, too. And so inexpensive though so artistic. Large lidded casserole, $1.25; small one, $1.10; skillet, $1.10; lidded bean pot, $1; deep pie dish, 65c; chubby batter jug, 65c. You can safely order any or all of them sight unseen. Snellenburgs, China and Glassware Dept. (3rd fl.)

LUSCIOUS FORMALS and dinner frocks can be found in the Snellenburg College Shop, 2nd fl. They come in sizes 9 to 15, and remember that in this College Corner "junior" is a size and not an age. Imagine rayon chiffons with long sleeves, for any slim figure, at only $14.95. Besides, there are rayon taffetas and crepes with net, some jerseys, etc., with off-shoulder lines, new capelet sleeves, or strapped shoulders. Some are trimmed with sequins. The black and white combinations are stunning, the pastels as sweet as candy! Prices are $14.95, $16.95, $19.95, $25. Many models are sophisticated enough for mothers, too.

HAVE ENOUGH glasses for holiday dinners! The Snellenburg Glass and China Dept. has an array of glasses in a "Tropic Rose" pattern by "Sharpe," as delicate as—paradoxically—frost. They'll add glamour to any table. They include slender goblets, high sherbets, cocktails, wines, low sherbets, etc., etc. Open stock, too! All types of "Tropic Rose" are only 50c each. (3rd fl.)

P.S. Shop at this friendly store—Market from 11th to 12th, thru to 1125-29 Chestnut St., Phila. Or order by mail. Or 'phone free (5c, 10c and 15c out-of-town calls only.) Clippings appreciated. Penna. number, ENTerprise 10160; New Jersey, WX-1150. Cheerio! Faithfully, FAITH

By the Rev. J. H. Queen
Pastor, Bethel A. M. E. Church

We thank Thee, O Father, for the universe. The stars of the heavens, the mountains and plains, the trees and meadows, the rivers and the seas all tell of Thy marvelous power. Give us the secret of using these great gifts to the honor and praise of Thy name. May we consider ourselves as stewards of creation, keeping an eager vigilance over all that Thou has entrusted in our hand, and as nature obeys Thy will may we too carry out Thy divine purposes. Through Jesus we pray. Amen.

Officer Addresses The Hulmeville P. T. A.

children from a lot of trouble and the parents many heart-aches."

One great menace today added the officer is the desire on the part of girls and boys reaching the age of about 15 to secure jobs. "They get big money for their years, then they want cars. Finding they can't secure much gas they resort to stealing it. The result is more trouble."

A number of questions were asked by the P. T. A. members, regarding canteens for youths, playgrounds for children of all ages, etc. "Keep the children busy, off the street corners, and thus out of mischief," was the manner in which the speaker summed up the discussion. He added that in the past few years juvenile delinquency cases have run ahead of criminal cases in the county courts." Cpl. Evans also reminded that the number of state police officers located at South Langhorne barracks has dropped during war times from 20 to eight, thus making their work more difficult from many angles.

The business meeting was in charge of Mrs. Herbert Rongley, president; with Mrs. Helen Cramer in charge of records.

Men of the association plan to paint the cafeteria. Mr. Binder reported that to date this term nearly five tons of scrap paper has been collected by pupils. The P. T. A. decided to divide the money received from sale of such between the association and the students, so that the latter may use the funds to purchase items for school which they desire. The storage place for the scrap paper is to be changed.

A brief report on the joint sessions of the Hulmeville, Langhorne, and South Langhorne P. T. A.'s at the latter town recently was given by Mrs. Rongley, she also mentioning that the speakers, Dr. and Mrs. Grover C. Myers, had addressed pupils in the schools the following morning. The local P. T. A. voted to assume its share of the costs of those programs.

A Christmas party is to be held in December, with each one urged to secure a new member in the meantime and take him or her to the December meeting. Miss Margaret Perry reported 40 paid-up memberships to date this term.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Hilda Wunsch and Mrs. G. A. Japchen.

Community Funds Raise $20,350,708

Community-War Fund campaigns in every county in Pennsylvania have raised a total of $20,350,708 for local and National War Fund agencies, according to a report made by Ralph E. Weeks, state campaign chairman. This is 79.3% of the combined goal of $25,000,000 for the state.

Of this total amount $7,680,413 is for USO, War Prisoners Aid, United Seamen's Service and the 19 war relief agencies which are members of the National War Fund. This figure represents 77% of the state's share for these agencies. The remainder was raised for home front agencies of established community chests.

Every one of the 67 counties in the state has made a report on campaign progress, Mr. Weeks said. Twenty-one counties have reached or exceeded their quotas.

Counties now over the top are: Beaver, Berks, Blair, Butler, Clarion, Cumberland, Delaware, Erie, Forest, Lebanon, Lehigh, McKean, Mercer, Mifflin, Monroe, Montour, Snyder, Sullivan, Venango, Warren and York.

For campaign purposes the state has been divided into six areas, with two districts in each area. Leading area this week is Area C composed of 15 counties in the central part of the state. Vance C. McCormick and Samuel W. Fleming, Jr., co-chairmen of this area, report $2,433,646 for 95.6% of quota. Of this amount $994,995 is for the National War Fund agencies.

To R. R. Underwood of Oil City, chairman of district 1, goes the distinction of first place in district standings with a report of $1,040,-260 or 98.9% of quota. Of this amount $364,579 is for the USO, USS, War Prisoners Aid and 19 war relief agencies.

Mr. Underwood's district is composed of Clarion, Crawford, Erie, Forest, Warren and Venango counties. All but Crawford have already hit the 100% mark.

Following is a report of the remaining five areas in the state:

Area A, made up of 11 northwest Pennsylvania counties, reports $1,337,037 or 94.4% raised through its chairman. Dr. Ralph D. Hetzel. Of this amount reported from Area A $505,744 is for USO, War Prisoners Aid and the 19 war relief agencies.

C. E. Bennett, chairman of Area 92.4% of goal. Area B represents B, reports $6,534,173 raised for 13 counties in the southwest part of the state. Of the amount raised in Area B $2,678,825 is for War Fund agencies.

S. Dale First, Jr., Area D chairman, reports $443,419 raised for 72.4% of goal. This Area D figure includes $223,418 for War Fund agencies from this 11 county section in north central Pennsylvania.

Area E, made up of 9 counties in the northeast part of the state, reports $1,813,994 or 88.4% of goal. This Area E figure includes $562,-026 for the War Fund agencies.

Robert Dechart, chairman of Area F representing the southeast section of Pennsylvania, reports $7,788,439 for 65.3% of goal. Of this amount for Area F $2,715,402 is for National War Fund agencies.

meantime Yacker had gone to a police station and turned in over $700 to the lieutenant in charge, which he said McCann had given him for safekeeping.

Approximately 80 persons, including two young women in the service, attended the Armistice dinner and annual get-together of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Albert R. Atkinson, Jr., Post, No. 210, American Legion, at the headquarters in Doylestown on Monday.

Guest at the meeting, which was featured by the serving of a chicken dinner, was Mrs. George W. Shock, who presented certificates of merit to Mrs. Tobias F. Hafler, Mrs. Oscar Geddes and Mrs. George C. Butler for outstanding sales of war bonds and stamps.

Young women who are in the service and who attended the meeting were S. K. 3/c Sara Stover, who is stationed in Hutchinson, Kansas, and A. M. M. 3/c Gene Leister, Kingsville, Texas.

Germany on Verge of Losing Two of Its Bastion Cities

the eastern outskirts of the Hungarian capital.

Final phase of the battle for Budapest appeared imminent with the Russians' seizure of Jaszbereny, a heavily fortified town 30 miles east of the city. The Soviet forces captured 50 towns and villages in the stepped-up battle for Hungary and, north of Budapest, moved to within a few miles of the industrial center of Miskolc, fifth largest city in the country.

To Berlin, from Britain, through the night went a load of bombs; and, from Germany to London, at the same time, came new reports regarding the mystery of Adolf Hitler.

The British Air Ministry announced that Mosquito bombers blasted Berlin with 4,000-pounders.

The London Daily Mail, printing a Stockholm report that quoted an unidentified person who had jjust returned from Germany, said that Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler had been appointed by Hitler as Deputy Fuehrer. The Daily Mail's informant at Stockholm said that Hitler, as has been the case ever since the attempt on his life in July, was not present at the meeting two days ago when Himmler was named as his personal successor.

In the Pacific, American ground forces surged ashore in the Mapia Islands, 145 miles northwest of Biak on Dutch New Guinea. The attack was carried out with support of a heavy aerial bombing attack and naval bombardment.

General Douglas MacArthur announced that only slight resistance was encountered, and his voice of freedom radio station on Leyte island in the Philippines commented that allied forces have "swallowed up another Japanese island position off the northern coast of New Guinea."

General MacArthur's forces encircled a reinforced Japanese regiment near Ormoc and virtually severed the vital Ormoc Road on the Yamashita line. MacArthur also reported that another element of his forces are sweeping through a range of hills toward the Ormoc corridor after capturing three strategic heights and the town of Jaro. A third American ground force pressed up the Ormoc Road from a point ten miles south of the beleaguered town where the reinforced Japanese defenders are pocketed.

Military analysts in Washington, viewing the Leyte campaign, predicted that Japan's efforts to bolster the garrisons on the embattled island would enhance General MacArthur's chances for obtaining a decisive victory sooner than expected in the Philippines.

Arrest Ex-Convict For Four Holdups and One Attempt

Calling it a night, Hyder returned home, Saturday night, November 4, he drove up to Montgomery county, and at Horsham, near the U. S. Naval Air Station, is reported to have held up the garage of Fire Chief Harold Matthews, on Route 611, and stole $20 in cash after sticking up the owner.

Then Hyder drove to Abington to the tap room of Frank Romaos, where he really staged a show with the owner.

"I always buy the first beer for a man in uniform and when I offered Hyder a beer, he said to me, 'I don't want your beer, I want your money'," Romaos told State Police.

It was then that Romaos invited Hyder to come back of the bar and get the money. Hyder said "no, you give it to me." Then Romaos started calling out a few names of people he pretended were upstairs. The only person upstairs was a woman and she hurried down.

Hyder remained, quiet and collected, and so did Romaos and his sister, who said to the bandit: "That's not a nice thing to do; you in uniform, trying to hold up a place."

Hyder looked them both over and after warning them not to move until he got away, commented as he departed: "Well I think you are both crazy."

Tuesday night, November 7th—election night—Hyder returned to Bucks county to the gasoline station of Uriah Mease, where he talked over election results with the owner of the place and then said: "I'm sorry I have to do this, but I need the money." Then he pulled out his loaded revolver and demanded the owner to turn over his cash, about $35. He left in his usual fashion, walking some distance away to his parked car.

Hyder told police that he met his wife last January when she was working in Philadelphia as a waitress. They were married in February.

Hyder's criminal record, furnished by the police, they say is as follows:

1932—Arrested in ElPaso, Texas, larceny; served 60 days.

1933—Arrested in Greenville, S. C., as a hobo and turned over to Baltimore police.

1934—Arrested in Petersburg, Va., for larceny of auto.

1934—Arrested in Baltimore for carrying concealed deadly weapons; sentenced to 3 months.

1935—Arrested in Abington, Va., by State Police for carrying concealed deadly weapons.

1935—Arrested in Greenville, S. C., for trespassing; served 12 days.

1935—Arrested in Toccoa, Ga., for trespassing.

1935—Arrested at Baton Rouge, La., for robbery and sentenced to 2 to 7 years in the Louisiana State Penitentiary.

1940—Arrested in Greenville, S. C., and held for investigation.

1940—Arrested in Reidsville, N. C., on a charge of false pretense.

1940—Arrested in Reading, Pa., on a hold-up charge; sentenced to 2 to 4 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

Trooper Emory said that Hyder had not told them as yet that he had served time in the penitentiary.

After his Reading holdup and serving a sentence in the "pen", Hyder registered under the criminal law in Philadelphia and was later inducted into the U. S. Army Air Corps, serving for some time at a camp in St. Louis, before being discharged as being "unable to comprehend." It was through the criminal registration in Philadelphia that State Police secured one of the clues that led to Hyder's arrest.

Hyder told State Police that he was born in Spartansburg, N. C., and that he was raised in an orphanage.
